

Harry Vardon

Harry Vardon, the winner of six British Opens and a U.S. Open, did much to popularize the game by conducting a series of exhibitions in the United States. One of his favorite trick shots was to place a ball in a shrub and then, taking an iron without too much loft, send it rocketing straight into the air and have it land in the same shrub. And he would do it time after time, just to prove it wasn't a fluke.
